Country Reports, providing a country-by-country look at national laws and guidelines, are continuously being prepared and released to subscribers on a regular, ongoing basis. In addition to extensive primary legal and policy documents, these reports distill each governing body's rules and regulations into clearly defined areas of the law:

- Organization of Sport looks at issues such as freedom of association, governmental conditions and permits, public safety standards, tax, and dispute settlement
- Sports and Employment examines fundamental rights and obligations, employment regulations, Social Security and benefits issues, labor market regulation, the legal status of sportsmen and women, and more
- Doping in Sport provides in-depth insights into the growing importance of performance-enhancing substance abuse regulations in public policy, in criminal, civil and administrative law, doping sanctions, and procedures
- Sport Commerce delves into the legal intricacies of negotiating and buying sports media and television rights, sponsorships, and merchandising agreements

Each Country Report follows the same, logical outline, so locating and comparing laws in different countries is easy. Plus each report features a variety of detailed indexes, tabs, and other features designed to dramatically reduce research time.
