This set of volumes in the International Encyclopaedia of Laws presents a country-by-country survey of constitutional law throughout the world, and is also in the process of publishing, in one source, all of the constitutions of the world in English translations.

Each national monograph includes detailed information of the country's political system, historical background, sources of constitutional law, form of government (outlining the legal status, the competence and the working of central state powers, etc.), state form and subdivisions of the state, component states and decentralized authorities, citizenship (especially nationality and the legal position of aliens), and specific problems such as foreign relations, taxing and spending power, emergency laws, the power of the military, and the constitutional relation between Church and State.

So far, the constitutions of 30 countries are reproduced in full.

Each monograph follows the outline below:

Introduction. The Authors. Table of Contents. List of Abbreviations. Preface. General Introduction. Selected Bibliography.

Part I: Sources of Constitutional Law (Notion and Hierarchy).

1. Treaties.
2. Constitution.
3. Legislation and Equivalent Legislative Rules.
